Francis Wilson's new operatis, 'The Merry Monarch," which comes to Col. Sinn's New Park Theatre, next week, has a story located in India, in which a king, a royal astrologer, a traveling peddler of perfumery, an ambassador from a neighboring court, a marriagable princess and her female companion and the ambassador's private secretary are the principal personages. The plot, music and dialogue are each excellent, and Wilson has given the piece a magnificent mounting which comulines all the good qualities of a comic opera and those of a gorgeous spectacle.
